

Catch the Euro 2016 action with the VQ Blighty

A must have gadget to ensure footy fans never miss a match

20th May 2016 - Following a promising run-up to the summer for Roy Hodgson and his squad, excitement surrounding the Euros 2016 is undoubtedly starting to build.

As France beckons all those lucky enough to make the trip across the Channel, the VQ Blighty portable radio is on hand to ensure football fans left behind can tune into the punditry of John Motson and keep up with the latest action whilst out and about.

Small enough to fit into any fan's pocket, the Blighty's comprehensive digital/analogue radio reception is ideal for listening to matches and music. With a free pair of headphones accompany each radio; the Blighty is a discreet option for those that want to secretly catch-up on the score whilst at work.

Available in either red or black, the VQ Blighty also boasts a 10 hour battery life, a soft-touch responsive control button for easy navigation and a vivid 1.6 LCD screen that ensures it can easily be read in the sunshine (if we ever get any this year!) At £49.99, its affordable price tag furthermore means it is the perfect companion for those fans wishing to cheer their team over the line.
